

Review of: "Determinants of Women Entrepreneurs' Business Performance: Evidence from Micro and Small-Scale Enterprises in Arba Minch Town, Southern Ethiopia"

Indranil De¹

¹ Institute of Rural Management Anand

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article conducts some statistical tests on the effect of access to assets, technology, and finances as well as skills on women's enterprises' performance. The article lacks in-depth analysis. The following may be considered for improvement:

Educational qualifications may be considered as a determining factor.

The measurement of the performance of the enterprise is extremely opaque. It needs to be explained properly.

The results are very generic, may not be valid only for women's enterprises. The author needs to find how they are different from male enterprises.

The author has not taken any regional level variables that may impact the enterprise's performance.