

Review of: "Sentiment Analysis on Social Media"

Karen Howells¹

¹ Coventry University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

There are grammatical issues, with words being given Capital letters in the middle of sentences.

Some references are engineering style (numbers in square brackets) and some are APA or Harvard style, but not quite. It is important that the referencing is the same throughout the document, and I would suggest APA 7 as a format.

At no point has the research mentioned the fact that computers parsing natural language cannot always categorise correctly, or that sarcasm and humour can lead to incorrect deductions.

The methodology is not complete. It does not describe the actual method that was adopted.

There are no results.

There is very little literature in the literature review.

There is much work to be done for this paper to come to an acceptable level as a piece of research.