I found this article very interesting and this is an area where more research is needed. This is an important information for physicians taking care of autistic people.

I recommend the following:

- Rationale of the study
- Hypermobility is not a synonymus of hypermobile EDS
- More demographic information will be interesting
- Limitations, selection bias
- The results section is hard to follow, although it contains very valuable information

Thank you for the opportunity, I really enjoyed reading your work.
