I appreciate the chance to evaluate the work titled "A Review of Transformation and Digital Literacy for Sustainable Development in the Greater Mekong Subregion - Working Paper."

There is little data to support the research, and it is unclear how urgent the study has to be done. Furthermore, it's unclear what research methods were employed. The work seems more like an introduction than a thorough investigation of the subject.

While the methodology used in the review is not specifically mentioned in the abstract, it is important to provide information on the methods used for data gathering and analysis. This is necessary to ensure that the study's conclusions are reliable and sturdy.

Any potential study constraints, such as potential biases or gaps in the body of existing literature, must be identified in the paper.
