

Review of: "[Commentary] Decolonisation of Health Care in Tanzania"

An incredibly important topic, especially in today's climate. Despite it being an opinion piece, it does attempt to highlight the challenges faced on a daily basis in many an African healthcare setting, without going too in-depth. At times, I believe it is rather unfair to compare our systems to those of the Global North, especially factoring in the difference in political atmosphere between the North and the South. This paper attempted to fulfill a difficult objective, and I commend the authors on a fine outcome, with a well-structured analysis. The latest version shows that recommendations were taken into consideration, and this has helped improve the overall flow and fluency of the paper.
