The purpose of the research paper is very interesting . The low quality of the jobs have led to lots of dissatisfaction eventually making employees to choose entrepreneurship . The author has studied how subjects feels aversion to the risk of failing when starting a new business were detected. The fear of failure of new entrepreneurs is studied herein . The author has used logit regression method including 52 significant variables were counted in the four periods. The most interesting part of the research paper is precision and clarity in presentation in pictorial form . From the readers point of view , it is very easy to understand
