Review of: "Perceptions of Academic Dishonesty: Insights from the University of Tehran"

Christophe Premat[1]

1 Stockholm University

I think that this article has valuable data and analysis. The quantitative analysis highlights very important findings that should be commented on a little bit more in comparison with previous literature. Maybe you could also give more details about the local recommendations of the University of Tehran (if there are any) on academic integrity/academic dishonesty/plagiarism (the three concepts have to be distinguished). It would be interesting as you refer to some prior studies made on Shiraz University.

Maybe you should also point out a discourse on plagiarism and academic dishonesty in Western universities in a context of strong concurrence between Higher Education institutions (especially with a discourse on plagiarism attitudes among international students). This discourse could be commented on with the help of some scientific articles on this question.