

Review of: "I is Another"

S.A. Popy¹

¹ Noakhali University of Science and Technology

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article deals with the problems of identity and understanding of the self. Focusing on the differences it sheds light on the dialogic notion of self where different voices can be heard together. Its references to different philosophical concepts help it to be expressive and deep. In terms of argumentation, content, and referencing the paper demands much critical acclaim. However, I found the conclusion fluid. There could have been some ending focus of the author connecting to the overall discussion.