

Review of: "Human Rights Aspects in Infrastructure Projects in the President Regulation Number 120 Year 2022"

Kehinde Babalola

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The abstract does not give details that are sufficient to inform the reader what the paper is all about. The abstract is an important aspect of the paper that should speak to the introduction, methods, and conclusion of the paper.

The introduction of the paper does not encapsulate the problem the research paper is trying to address. While the link between human rights and infrastructural projects was identified as per the regulations in Indonesia, how this affects the citizens is not detailed in the paper.

The paper failed to explain the methodology used. That being said, what exactly are the aim and objectives of the paper? Are you trying to evaluate Presidential Regulation Number 120 year 2022 using the lens of human rights principles? If yes, there is a need to show the reader how the human rights principles are used in analysis, which requires a whole section of its own.

There is a need for a section on discussion where each of these themes is discussed in detail as they affect the human rights of citizens positively or negatively, with examples.

Finally, a section on conclusion which brings out the key takeaways from the paper while linking the conclusion back to the aim and objectives of the paper.