The title is not as engaging as it could be. Consider rewriting it to be more specific and communicable. All the key features are already incorporated in the abstract. The introduction section could benefit from a clearer articulation of the research gaps, which are crucial in guiding the central research question and the specific research objectives. Before that, the articulation of research problems lacked sufficient work from previous studies in the relevant field. Moreover, the researcher should add their own argument in the introduction of the study. The literature review could be strengthened with more relevant literature and logical grounds. The research gap should be clearly defined. The statement of the problem is discussed without sufficient relevant references. More references are required to establish the study. Without sufficient reference, how can we justify the rationale of the study? Well-articulated. Please ensure the reflection of your title through your research questions and objectives. You may add a few references or justify the scope of your research through scholarly opinion. The research design is straightforward and comprehensive, outlining how the research will be conducted and what variables will be the focus. The context is rich in detail, providing a clear understanding of the study's framework. However, the limitations do not touch upon the methodological limitations. It's essential for all kinds of research. Include all references cited in the text in the references section. The researcher is requested to use more careful and meaningful word choices to make the language more engaging and communicable.
