Many thanks for your kind invitation to review the article on NGO engagement in Planetary Health. I am very sorry but I am not able to complete a full peer review at this point, owing to other commitments. I had a quick look at the article and at the existing peer review, and I agree with the reviewer. Ziveri and Asaduzzaman develop an interesting argument, however I think there needs to be a much more concise definition and exploration of what they have in mind with the concept of 'planetary health' and how that differs from current responses to the climate crisis, including humanitarian responses.
