This is a well researched and articulately presented paper, however, I observed as follows:

1. The paper title can be framed as: sociocultural determinants of pre-drinking and drinking games amongst undergraduate university students

The influence and motivation should be proven in the paper. Since there is determinant in the title, no need to add influence and motivation.

2. Since the study is looking at Undergraduates, can university policies on alcohol consumption be included. This is to tell us if the University is predisposed to such social issue?

3. What is the country's law saying about alcohol consumption among young people.

4. What role does parent, guardian and care givers or anyone older than them, aside their peers that they had contact with before their university experience.

5. The social cultural aspect of the paper is not empirical enough. You can not base sociocultural on peers alone, without considering the influence of other social Institutions.

6. The limitations of the study was not reported.
