

Review of: "Agile Learning: An innovative curriculum for educators"

Sophie Reboud

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

An interesting description of agile methods and the implications of using them to train teachers. The list of methods and skills developed is very useful. Given the interest of the subject, it is frustrating, although unavoidable in a fairly short document, to have so little detail on the techniques presented or the methods used to achieve the results presented. This article could be followed up with articles going into more detail on the various themes and presenting the scientific method used for this research.