Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I would recommend to:

For the abstract: add more details about what you are talking about in the article, by following the same order of different paragraph.

For the introduction: It would be better to add a description to the figure 1.

History of CMV: the important sentence "Enders, Robbins" needs more details about the isolation method and from which tissue? also add a reference.

Pathogenesis: add some sentences about the virus cycle, infection and replication at cell level.

Clinical manifestations: add a reference for each of the first 3 sentences of the second paragraph.

General remarks: as we have adopted CMV as an abbreviation for your virus keep it the same for the whole paper. So remove H from HCMV also don't mention again the whole name of the virus.

Same other issue with abbreviations, PCR and ELISA. Once you mention it for the first time, no need to write again i the next paragraphs.
