

Review of: "Evaluation of Expenditure Control Measures on State Spending in Nigeria: An Empirical Approach with Internal Auditors of Ministries, Departments, and Agencies"

Sulaiman Weshah<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Al-Balqa Applied University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Summarizing the main arguments, the paper ends by stressing the significance of efficient spending control in managing public funds. Inadequate funding and rising demand for public services are problems that the conclusion alludes to, suggesting that better distribution of resources through fiscal policy and spending management may be necessary.

In sum, the paper lays a good groundwork for comprehending the background, aims, and methods of the research. To make the study more transparent and easier to replicate, further information on the sample size and data collecting tools would be helpful. A short explanation of possible limits and options for further study would also enhance the article.