

Review of: "Post-Conflict Reconstruction: How Social Identity Change Informs our Understanding of the Ukrainian Experience of Forced Migration"

Manal Fathi Anabtawi<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> University of Jordan

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This nicely written piece of research provides an in-depth understanding of the issue under study. The researchers described the situation of Ukrainian refugee women in the UK and how the government dealt with them. Research objectives were clearly stated, and a clear argument was formulated. Based on the theoretical framework, the researchers described the research methodology and how they accessed the field, as well as how informants had been recruited.

As they provided detailed descriptions of research procedures and data analysis, thematic analysis, which was appropriate for the qualitative methodology adopted, the findings of the research were presented and discussed in detail, which reflects the researchers' ability to correlate their objectives with research findings. Therefore, this research is accepted for publication without corrections.