

Review of: "ABC Group's Business Continuity Based on Uncertainty Analysis"

Gianfranco Pischedda¹

¹ University of Sassari

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This is an interesting and very actual topic since the last years have been characterised by economic, social, environmental and health challenges.

However, improving and modifying some parts of the manuscript seems necessary to maximise the authors' efforts and the topic's relevance.

I do not know the limit of the abstract's words. Still, context and background, motivation, hypothesis, methods, results, and conclusions are generally requested to make the abstract and the paper immediately understandable.

The same is for the introduction section, which should be more organised: starting from the general background and arriving at the specificity of the paper's aim could help the writer(s) clarify the study. In other words, the Introduction should be further improved, also from the literature point of view.

Also, the methodology should be clearer and more articulated.

Finally, conclusions should also be improved, considering the literature presented in the "literature review" section of the paper. Additionally, limits and future developments should be shown in the last part of the paper.