

Review of: "Sacred Plants and Their Miraculous or Healing Properties"

Kmar M'barek¹

¹ National Institute of Agronomy, Tunis

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Although the article addresses an interesting and complex subject, it also presents some potential negatives:

Lack of balance in perspectives: The article seems to primarily focus on the positive aspects and historical uses of psychoactive plants, but it could benefit from a more in-depth discussion of the negative implications, potential risks, and controversies surrounding their use.

Excessive generalizations: At times, the article appears to make excessive generalizations about the use and effects of psychoactive plants, without considering cultural variations, specific contexts, or contradictory research.

Lack of critical perspectives: While the article examines the ethnobotanical and historical aspects of psychoactive plants, it could benefit from a more critical analysis of the ethical, social, and political implications of their use and regulation.