

Review of: "Choosing Education Abroad: A Parental Perspective in China"

Pablo Ángel Morales Martínez

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article "Choosing Education Abroad: A Parental Perspective in China" discloses important guidelines or suggestions that should be considered by Chinese families who are interested and/or able to send their children to study abroad. In this sense, its content is considered to be precise and guiding. The author should take into consideration precisely suggesting documents, official websites and institutions in the country that interested Chinese families can consult when beginning the process of sending their children to study in foreign academic institutions.