

Review of: "An accuracy test of Altman and Zmijewski accounting-based bankruptcy models"

Ranjit Tiwari

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The essay is well-written and provides a fair comprehension of the accuracy of the accounting-based bankruptcy models developed by Altman and Zmijewski between 2016 and 2021. Here are some suggestions I have for you:

- a. The author might attempt to incorporate some current research.
- b. The methodology just discusses the Zmijewski and Altman models. The methods employed in this work to verify the accuracy of the two bankruptcy models may be included by the author.
- c. In the final remarks, the author may additionally provide a section discussing the implications of their work.