

Review of: "Nigeria's Implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals"

Darlaine Cunha¹

¹ Federal University of Maranhão

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The topic under discussion is both relevant and timely. The authors adeptly justify, in both the abstract and introduction, the significance of investigating the application of sustainable development goals in Nigeria. However, it would be beneficial in the introduction to delve into prior studies conducted in other nations, drawing particular attention to the research undertaken in Colombia, as outlined in "Moving the 2030 Agenda Forward: SDG Implementation in Colombia." DOI 10.1108/CG-11-2017-0268

Furthermore, Section 3 could be enhanced by incorporating an initial table summarising the key points. This would aid in providing a clearer overview of the data presented. Additionally, it is advisable to analyse the sub-items categorically, as certain sub-items appear to receive minimal exploration. Grouping similar sub-items could lead to a more cohesive and comprehensive analysis.

Lastly, I suggest merging the conclusion and recommendations into a single, more substantial section. This would allow for a deeper exploration of the final insights and suggestions derived from the research. By doing so, the authors would be able to offer a more impactful and conclusive ending to their study.