

Review of: "The problem of Morpho-Semantic Change and historical lexicography: The case of form VIII verbs in Arabic"

Maris Camilleri¹

¹ University of Essex

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This is interesting. I would have wanted to see more discussion associated with the claimed change, particularly given that the study employs a diachronic approach. I expected to find more elaboration on frequency differences and other such fluctuations when comparing one stage as opposed to the other. But what about ambiguous forms? Do we see a demise or a dominant use of one form as opposed to the other, etc.?