

Review of: "Addiction as a Loss of Inner Freedom"

Aniceto Masferrer¹

¹ Universidad de Valencia

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It is a well-designed and documented text that touches upon a complex issue that deserves a careful examination from an interdisciplinary perspective. The topic is relevant in our current society because addictions constitute a source of pain and frustration for many people, particularly among minors, adolescents, and youth in general. From a legal perspective, this topic is connected to the tendency to consider rights as the will of satisfying some individual wishes, what I've called 'Rights-desire' in a book that just came out: "The Making of Dignity and Human Rights in the Western Tradition. A Retrospective Analysis" (December 2023) (<https://link.springer.com/book/10.1007/978-3-031-46667-0>)