

Review of: "Technological Unemployment, Skill Mismatch and the Future of Higher Education in Post-Pandemic Nigeria"

Paula Cristina<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universidade Aberta Lisboa

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I'd like to start by thanking the author for the opportunity to review this manuscript, the subject of which is very topical and of interest to readers in the field of education.

I would also like to congratulate the author for carrying out the research in Nigeria and for giving us an insight into this area of research.

In order to improve the work, I suggest that:

some more recent literature be included - there are several articles and special issues dedicated to topics included in this research and which could be the subject of reflection by the author;

include more figures and data, not only to reinforce the importance and relevance of the research, but also to make it more credible;

the title and content should be more closely aligned, as a good title should provide a brief but complete description of the subject under study;

I also recommend reviewing the objectives and hypotheses, the methodology and the presentation of the results in relation to other studies. A final note on the list of references, which should be improved.

Good luck with your future research.