Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper proposes an exploration regarding environmental policy (Agenda 2030 and Ecological Rule of Law) and its implications for the development of women's skills, abilities, and capacities in all areas.

The first paragraph, Women's Capacities and Skills, Now We Call Them Circular Economy, is quite superficial. It doesn't look inside at the single questions and seems a sort of summary of rule of law evolution. Therefore, it should consider more deeply the relevant socio-economic and business literature. The references are quite dated.

The second paragraph does not provide proof of some observations and does not explain why the new approach is different from the oldest and what the concrete benefits of the proposed transformation are.

I missed the conclusions.
