I think this review is the first of its kind; therefore, it will contribute to or open space for researching/investigating more about the ragimot wildberry and its potential medicinal and nutritional values.

However, the author should consider and incorporate the following comments to enrich this review.

Title

The scientific name of the plant should be in the italic form.

Abstract part

In this section, it is better to review some potential secondary metabolites in the ragimot berry in addition to the primary metabolites: sugar, vitamin C, ...etc.

At the end of the 'abstract section', in addition to recommendation-like statements, the aim of the review has to be stated clearly.

Introduction part

In the text, you stated, "chapter"..... Is this paper a "chapter" or a "review"? Examples: line 2, 10.

It is better if you take the first sentence to the background where you already discussed ragimot. It has nothing relating to the nutritional value.

It is better if you mention the potential applications of some extra specific examples of phytochemicals (secondary metabolites) in the text body of the discussion.

Additionally, it is better if you supply some representative examples of the chemical structures of specific phytochemical compounds which have been reported from ragimot (along with the chemical names which are already provided in Table 1)

You can merge and modify the subtopics “Nutritional composition” and “Functional properties” as “Nutritional and medicinal values of.....”

“ragimot”, you write it sometimes as “Ragimot” and sometimes as “ragimot”?

The last sentences under the subtopic “Functional properties” require some citations or sources.

Subtopic “Efforts on cultivation”

The title of this review is not clearly in line with this subtopic. Please either modify the title of the review or incorporate this subtopic into the background of the review.

The paragraphs in this section should be developed in such a way that each paragraph conveys similar ideas.
