

Review of: "Women In Slum Risking Their Safety To Access And Usage Of Basic Water And Sanitation Facilities"

Celeste Novlloyd¹

¹ Northwest Samar State University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article is interesting since they took account of violence in terms of the access of water and sanitation facilities. However, I found it vague as to the methodology about how they came up with the selection of the study area. It was mentioned coastal and industrial slums. It does not mention about the inclusion and exclusion criteria. The phrase "from various parts of the world" is kind of misleading because it does not represent all parts of the world. This study is promising though and needs to be replicated with a more rigid methodology.