It is good work to study the gambling participation of college students. However, there are two suggestions:

1. It would be better to show why the four specific questions in the study are important before presenting the research questions.
2. It is better to increase the samples of some specific groups; for example, there are only eighteen people aged 34 and above, only sixteen people from other summarized beliefs, and only seven in their 5th year of college. The samples in these categories are small, which could increase the sample size or readjust the criteria for classifying the categories.
