1. Literature review is comprehensive, but it can be improved. You used literature from Western scholars; consider incorporating literature from non-Western scholars or studies that examine the intersection of CDA and AI in different cultural or geopolitical contexts. This can enrich your review by providing a more global and inclusive understanding of the topic and its implications.
2. You've effectively summarized various studies and their contributions to the field; consider integrating these findings into broader themes or patterns. Rather than presenting each study individually, identify common threads, disagreements, or gaps in the literature and discuss how they contribute to advancing our understanding of the interplay between CDA and AI.
3. Consider providing more explicit justification for the choice of document analysis and semi-structured interviews as specific methods within this approach. How do these methods complement each other and contribute to a more comprehensive understanding of the research problem?
4. Consider refining the objectives into specific research questions. Clear research questions can provide a focused direction for your study and guide the selection of appropriate data collection methods and analytical techniques.
5. Consider expanding on challenges and limitations; it can further enhance the depth and complexity of your discussion on the integration of CDA in AI research and development, offering a more balanced perspective on the opportunities and constraints of this approach.
