

Review of: "Gender and Organizational Conflict Management: The Mediating Role of Personality"

Rasha Saleh

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

In keeping with the scholarly literature, this paper treats the topic in a highly precise and inventive manner. The study concept is pertinent and intriguing. The article's excellent writing makes it easy to read. One thing that should be noted, though, is that the references cited have to be current in order to truly add to the piece what was new and what was found. I recommend reading up on studies that have been conducted in the previous five years on this subject; The abstract did not make it apparent what the research challenge was. It is crucial to improve the summary in order to make it accurately reflect your study and pique readers' attention. Incorporating the study's theoretical and practical contributions into the conversation is crucial.