This is a thorough and precise study of the water and hygiene conditions in four schools i Chegutu District in Zimbabwe. The theoretical background is sound and extensive. The survey of the views and habits of 81 students of the four schools on WASH practice clear and well presented. The final recommendations valid and very useful as guidance for others working with WASH in schools in the world. I think a discussion also on how to organize a safe supply of soap to the students could be added.
