

Review of: "Natural Surveillance and Natural Access Control: Implementation strategies for enhancing Safety in Indian Neighborhoods"

Gourpada Dey¹

¹ Shahjalal University of Science and Technology

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

A good, relevant and important topic. I've marked this as a good one. Spontaneous participation can solve urban problems easily. In a neighbourhood security issue is a optimum priority for success and no doubt natural access control and surveillance is a trusted way over the time. But it alone could not ensure the total safety but can improve if integrated with existing practice, rules and regulations. The positive thing about the article that the author have addressed the actual scenario, social bonding and other features of indian neighbourhood with care and respect for the cultural and behavioral identity and practice. It would be more better if more focused on some specific/detail points with case studies/examples, user experience and suggestions and alignment with national/local policies etc. However, I have found this interesting and useful. Best of luck to the author!... Prevention is way better then the cure, specially in urban security issue... I always agree.