The article is comprehensive in scope and covers several areas while discussing areas like economic impact, public health, social dynamics and education challenges. The authors have balanced the literature review with the general observations thereby offering a holistic view of the pandemic. The authors have identified the challenges & opportunities for innovation and resilience emerging from the COVID-19 crisis. The inclusion of insights from a global outlook are also praise-worthy.

However, authors can improve by offering detailed methodology, try to offer / generate new insights, delve into longitudinal analysis to offer insights into changes taking place over time to understand the pandemic's consequences.
