Qeios

Peer Review

Review of: "Women's Power in Family Decision-Making: An Intersectional Perspective"

Ashika Maharaj[1]

1. School of Commerce, University of KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa

I found the article to be both insightful and thought-provoking. Critical insights into the experiences of educated women when facing these traditional arrangements were done very well. I commend you on your piece.

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

doi.org/10.32388/WREQQW