

Review of: "The Future of Malaysian SMEs in the Digital Economy"

Ahmet Efe<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The abstract provides an overview of the study, stating its objectives and the research questions it aims to answer. The introduction section provides relevant background information, highlights the gap in knowledge, and identifies the research problem. The study also includes a review of the literature to support its arguments and claims. Overall, the study appears to meet the requirements of a scientific research paper in terms of structure and content.

The study demonstrates internal coherence by presenting a logical flow of information. It starts with an introduction that sets the context and presents the research problem. The objectives and research questions are clearly stated, and the subsequent sections provide relevant information and evidence to address these questions. The review of the literature supports the study's claims and is organized in a coherent manner. The study consistently focuses on the digital economy and its impact on Malaysian SMEs. The information provided in each section aligns with the study's overall purpose and contributes to a comprehensive understanding of the topic. Therefore, the study exhibits internal coherence.

So, the study appears to be compliant with scientific research requirements and demonstrates internal coherence.