

Review of: "Determinants of Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs) Sustainable Development in Africa"

Tijani F. Alhassan¹

¹ Moscow Polytechnic University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper investigates the impact of various factors on the sustainable development of MSEs. The article is well-structured and is well written.

However, the paper made several references to Ethiopia as though it was the focus of the study. Also, the generalisation of conclusions without understudying the differences among the 54 African countries is problematic. African countries, although, they seem very similar in various respects, however are very different in terms political, economic, and social aspects. Ethiopia is different from Ghana and so it is from Burkina Faso, etc.

The H1 must be recasted.

The conclusion must include the limitations of the study, what areas need further research, and the recommendations