

Review of: "Significance and its role in the historical constitution and transformation of social reality. A conceptual approach from enactive cognition"

Oksana Bohovyk

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The topic of the article is unquestionably attractive, quite relevant and original. The title is quite clear and consists of the subject and object of research. The article explores how cognition is involved in the establishment of social reality in history, presenting a comprehensive illustration of the subject. The article can benefit from the inclusion of well-defined procedures and methodology in the main body and abstract. In some places, the language suffers from habitual linguistic blemishes as indicated by phrases like "this theoretical essay intends to develop an hypothesis", "drawing from Jonas's (2000) theses about the cognitive capacity", "as well as a accumulation of experiences". The references are of suitable quality and quantity. However, the literature review should include the newest sources for the last five years. These suggestions aim to enhance the article's worth and do not detract from its value.

The article may be a part of more comprehensive research on a cognitive and historical perspective of significance and its role in the transformation of social reality.