

Review of: "Establishing a Multidisciplinary Human Resources Development Institute Under Public-Private Partnerships"

Eros Luciano Faraci

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The use of public-private partnerships represents an important tool for maintaining a constant connection between universities and industry. The article only mentions the use of PPP in other fast-developing countries like the Republic of Korea, Japan, Singapore, and Malaysia. I suggest explaining in more detail the application of this tool in these countries (advantages, disadvantages, limitations, etc.), also including a critical analysis considering the different socio-economic aspects between these countries and India.