

Review of: "Could governmental interventions improve subjective well-being during the COVID-19 pandemic? Findings from 750 street vendors in Cali, Colombia"

José González Tovar¹

¹ Universidad Autónoma de Coahuila

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It is an interesting article and still valid due to the issues of the pandemic, in addition to the social relevance for the population to which the study is directed.

In the method section, it is important that for the subjective variables, evidence of the validity of the instruments used is presented, at least content validity. If previously validated scales were used, it is important to clarify why it does not appear in the document. Conclusions are accurate when reporting findings