This review is a very comprehensive description of how Danish community pharmacies have developed and serves as an example of best practices to be integrated in healthcare around Europe. It also shows the development and integration takes a lot of time and what opportunities and barriers are faced on the way. It is encouraging to see several pharmacy service are implemented, running and are also remunerated. This show Danish pharmacists have been able to support their value as healthcare professionals with concrete numbers and evidence. At the end several challenges and opportunities for the future are also described, the review could have been improved further in this section by also describing the steps being taken to meet this opportunities and or challenges.
