I really liked every word I read. Being a humanitarian medical worker in African countries, I could easily relate to these experiences and those contexts. My only concern/question is whether the target is to publish in an academic journal or to share testimony/personal experience; the way its written is more for sharing testimony/experience in a non-academic journal or platform. It`s perfect the way it is now for sharing experience and snapping the refugees world, but not for academic purposes as referencing and citations,,,etc

Best of luck Doc. Kelly with the article and more humanitarian achievements to come :)
