

Review of: "Improving agriculture and food security in Africa: Can the one health approach be the answer?"

Pablo Cabanelas¹

¹ Universidad de Vigo

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Authors provide an interesting description about the challenges that Sub-Saharan Africa (SSA) will face in terms of agriculture development and food security. It includes a compilation of different initiatives and activities that intends to improve agriculture and health, paying specific attention to one health approach. In this regard, the paper suggests a series of ideas to foster and improve the application of one health in SSA to avoid potential problems, including different ideas sustained with multiple references. What I miss is a clear definition of one health approach since introduction. It will help to identify the aim of the paper. I would also incorporate more sub-sections to precise what each part of the paper refers to and a series of implications for both academics, policymakers and, if possible, for agriculture businessmen.