Abstract is too general; more information can be added. Some keywords can be changed/modified. Introduction is too short. Authors should add the novelty of the research and hypotheses in the introduction. Main claims are not properly placed in the context of previous literature. Authors did not conceive a strong idea from the reviewed literature.

Paragraphs and sentences did not have any link. There should be uniformity, i.e., percent or %. Further, there is a striking lack of connectors between sentences, leading to confusion. Spellings and English language need to be checked thoroughly. Overall, drafting of many sentences needs to be improved. Tidying up the text is also suggested. The conclusion can be more constructive and in detail.
