Factors Affecting Economic Crisis in Ethiopia: A Literature Review

Abstract

The abstract can be improved upon by addressing some issues. First, abstract is not meant to be paragraphed. Again, they are italicized.

Providing clarity of Objective: The first sentence may be shorter and more directly convey the study's purpose, for example "This research effort addresses what factors are causing the current economic situation in Ethiopia, a developing country in East Africa."

Concentrate on the Following Crucial Outcomes: The second paragraph may benefit from a concise restatement by emphasizing the key discoveries. For instance, it could read as follows: "The economic crisis in Ethiopia is influenced by external factors including volatile commodity prices, external debt, political instability, ineffective governance, and inadequate infrastructure," as revealed in the literature review.

prioritize Policy Suggestions: A more substantial emphasis could be placed on the policy recommendations in the concluding paragraph. To illustrate, the study suggests that to address these challenges in an efficient manner, policies prioritizing the advancement of political security, significant expenditures in development of infrastructure, and diversifying the economy should be implemented..

Introduction

As defined, a crisis is: While the introductory section provides a general overview of the term "crisis," it does not offer a detailed depiction of an economic crisis. It is recommended that a more precise definition be provided, encompassing the fundamental elements that comprise an economic crisis: a decline in asset valuations, an increase in unemployment rates, and a contraction in economic activity..

Scope of the crisis: The introduction highlights the ongoing challenges faced by Ethiopia, despite its notable economic growth as one of the rapidly developing countries in Africa in recent times. In order to enhance comprehension of the present economic crisis, it is advisable to furnish additional contextual information pertaining to the magnitude of the crisis and its ramifications on the populace of Ethiopia.

Focus of the study: The introductory section of this paper outlines its objective, which is to identify and analyse the various elements that contribute to the economic crisis in Ethiopia. It would be advantageous to enhance the accuracy of the investigation by defining the particular components that will be scrutinised. This approach will enhance the study's level of concentration and feasibility.

Relevance of the study: The introductory section highlights the apprehension expressed by scholars and policymakers on the economic challenges faced by Ethiopia. Providing an elucidation of the significance of the examination of the determinants influencing the economic crisis in Ethiopia would be advantageous. This will enhance the study's applicability to policymakers and other important stakeholders.

Conclusion

Strengthen the Importance of the Findings: Reaffirm the paramount significance of the identified factors in engendering Ethiopia's prevailing economic predicament. This will underscore the significance and immediacy of attending to these matters.

Highlight the Significance of the Holistic Approach: Reaffirm the imperative nature of adopting a comprehensive and all-encompassing methodology in tackling the prevailing economic crisis. This could entail furnishing concrete illustrations of how disparate policy domains can be amalgamated to effectively tackle the fundamentals of the crisis.

Implore policymakers to expeditiously and resolutely undertake measures to effectively tackle the aforementioned challenges and foster a paradigm of sustainable economic advancement within the Ethiopian context.
