The manuscript presents a good summary of the content as an aid to the author for the initial organization of the research. However, you still need to structure the article. To this end, I make some suggestions in order to assist the author in this structuring. Firstly, the introduction must present the theme and research objectives clearly, stating what the research brings new to the studied scenario. I suggest that a structured literature review be carried out, such as a systematic literature review, to outline what has already been studied on the topic and possible research gaps. I suggest including a section on methodology, describing the methods used in the research. If a systematic literature review is carried out, for example, the methodology section must describe the review method used. I suggest that the discussion section be placed after the research results and before the conclusions.
