

Review of: "Implementation of e-learning during COVID-19"

Camille Jackson<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> University of Technology, Jamaica

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The title of the paper is very interesting and will draw a lot of readers in the field of education, since all educators lived through this ordeal. However, the paper lacks rigor, while the phenomena was new, there are other events that have occurred that the author could use as comparison to what was happening during the pandemic.

The introduction(background) needs more information what is e learning, what is its origin. The author alluded to this mode of learning being around for several years but what is its origin, who purported it ect. All the definitions given here under main e- learning issues are there original thoughts from the author? All the definitions given under main e- learning issues needs to be cited. The author has said the paper is a case study, who are the participants in the case, is it all the universities in China that is a part of the study.

All other comments stem from the lack of evidence of other research done in the area that would substantiate this study. The method needs to be worked on the results need more work and the discussion.