

Review of: "Toward a comprehensive behavioral model of hurricane preparedness: The Protective Behavior Model"

Hui Liew¹

¹ University of Nebraska, Kearney

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I find considerable merit to this review. I believe this is one of the first studies that seek to review existing psychological theories and integrate elements from these theories to create a new and more holistic framework, The Protective Behavior Model (PBM). One minor comment. Cited references in the Literature Review section reference for the definitions of empowerment and power are somewhat dated. Even though these studies were undertaken by prominent researchers, some of the references go all the way back to 1962 and all references are more than 15 years old. See if the author(s) can do a cited reference search on Google Scholar or other platforms to find out whether more recent works have cited some of these dated references and provide those as supplement to the references.