The topic addressed is very relevant and reflects the timeline of impact of Russia and Ukraine's war to destabilize the business and therefore the Stock Market.

The topic's relevance to current global economics is well aligned, as well as, the structured approach covers relevant dimensions for analysis in relation to considered historical data. But the analysis and the contribution of the work is based on obvious parameters and thus the findings are as anticipated - thus novelty is not high.

Approach for data gathering and analysis is clear and well defined, supported by relevant sources and tools used for analysis. The conclusion is rather brief and should be enhanced to include core findings, and next steps in research that are covered in the earlier sections.

Overall, the paper addressed the hypothesis in a logical and structured manner and may be considered for publication.
