This article is interesting but the way of writing this article needs to be improved following general rules such as Introduction, Methodology Result and Discussion, Conclusion (IMRAD)

1. In the introduction, the research background should be clear. Research objectives and research questions to be answered. Explain the method used, the respondents used and what the results are so that in the introduction section the reader can immediately understand what the contents of this article are.

2. In the Methodology area, it should be explained how this research model was formed, what is the theoretical basis of this model. Then how about the development hypothesis

3. The use of the SEM-PLS method requires that the research model images in this article have not been found so that this article confuses the reader. It is advisable to add a research model and development hypothesis.

4. The results obtained are not only from the calculation results but also need to be explained from the discussion area what was found or what novelties were obtained.

Finally, provide an explanation of the future research, implications & limitation of this research for science and its application.
