Thank you for trusting me to review this interesting article. This article reviews the theoretical basis of conflict resolution against a comprehensive framework of peace studies and its application. According to the author, this study is useful for finding theoretical models and practical tools in mediation, negotiation, and transformative approaches to conflict.

This study emphasizes the importance of ethics in conflict resolution, touching on key ethical dimensions such as impartiality, neutrality, fairness, and consideration of long-term consequences. Interestingly, this study uses a multidisciplinary approach to explore the essence of peace, revealing conditions, facilitators, and paths to lasting peace. According to him, this approach goes beyond violence and offers a different understanding of peace as a dynamic process woven from the threads of justice, equality, and human dignity. This introduction describes the author's horizon of thinking in developing problems and conflict resolution.

The reviewed literature draws on state-of-the-art references and arrives at a synthesis that contributes to a holistic understanding of conflict resolution within the broader framework of peace studies, providing scholars, policymakers, and practitioners with valuable insights and tools to effectively navigate the complexities of conflict.

In the concluding point, I underline this point: "A comprehensive examination of peacebuilding and conflict prevention underscores the indispensable nature of proactive measures in averting hostility and safeguarding global tranquility. Concurrently, the ethical dimension casts an ethically grounded foundation for conflict resolution endeavors, calling for principled conduct and steadfast adherence to human rights tenets. Such a synthesis underscores the need for robust institutional support and international cooperation to amplify the effectiveness of conflict resolution mechanisms."
